FIR : RECORD.

New York, March 2. Shortly after two o'clock this morning, fire alarm broke out in Campbell & Vantassel's feundry, on West 33d street, a building ranging from two to four stories. Large tenements filled with Italians stood alongside the foundry buildings and the excitement was indescribable, but firemen succeeded in confining the flames to the foundry and nobody was injured to any extent. Hundreds of Italians, however, were driven into the street, half clad under the falling sleet.

for the nurnose of revising or correcting the voting lists. The men employed on the electric cars have thus far this winter been very fortu-nate in regard to cold weather, as there has been considerably less than the usual amount, although there have been times during the season when the temperature was much lower than they, for their comfort could wish. A fine Lorse had a somewhat narrow escape from a watery grave at D.Sargent's Sons' ice field yesterday. While being driven across some planking over an open space with tis mate the animal in some manner get pushed into the water, and considerable time and work was necessary before he could be extricated from his dangerous place.

Mr. Greenleaf A. Mayo, of South Brewer, who took the contract to carry the mail on the new route recently established between the post office at that end of the city and the Maine Central depot in Bangor, has gone to Shawmut, and notices have been posted calling for new hids for the performing of the service. It is now being attended to by an assissant carrier.

The missionary concert which was to be held at the First Congregational church on next Sunday evening and at which Mr. Allen, of the Bangor Theological Seminary, was to deliver an address, has been postponed one week. Mr. Allen is to speak about a school in Van, an American city, and it is probable that another of eminary students, a native of Arme nia will make some remarks. The Cochran-Oler Ice Company expected to finish operations for the time being last night, but those in charge hope to get a second crop. A large space at the lower portion of the fields, which was the first to be opened by the concern, is now covered with ice about 7 inches in thickness. This has been "marked" in order to help along the freezing process, and if cold weather continues more of the crystal cakes will be harvested by this company. A DIFFICULTY. The people of the towns on what is known as the "back route" between South Brewer and Bucksport expected a mail yesterday, but did not get it, for reasons which we explain below. The contractors for this route are two Missouri men, who sub-let it to the carrier, Mr. George Cur ow, of this city. As no copy of the agreement between the contractors and the Brewer man was left with the Postal Department at Washington, through, as Mr Carlow's bondsman states, the reglect o' t'e former, the officials knew nothing of it, and so when the daily service, which we announced a few weeks ago, was decided upon, sent no notice to the enrier, out directed it to the Missourians. I'p to last night Mr. Carlow had received no rotice in regard to the increased service from his employers and the outcome of the matter is that no mail went over the route yesterday, as the insists that he must have instructions to make the change before he will do so and will continue his trips on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, as in the past, until such notification is given. Postmaster Nickerson, of South Brewer, attempted to find someone else to go over the route yesterday, but wis unable to procure any

The old theory that animal good temper might be accounted for on the ground that animals are sensible of pleasure and pain, but not of advantage and disadvantage, was only a half truth, for animals are subject to jealousy and jealousy is the direct result of a feeling of personal disadvantage. But it draws attention to the fact that occasions for disagreement in the case of most summils are rare and unusual

Deer light more fiercely than wolves, and wild sheep than lions; and though there is or was an eagle in the Zoo which was caught locked in the talons of another eagle when fighting in the spring, the flercest hirds are usually friendly with their own species, and while ruffs and black game fight like gladlators for their wives, the eagles and the perceptines, as a rule, mate in peace. Proximity, the severest trial to human temper, seldom ruffles the animal mind, and different species live in harmony together, each seeming, as in the case of owls and the pradrie dogs or, rooks and starlings, rather to prefer than shun the society of the other.

The choicest spots for homes are naturally the source of warfare among birds, and other animals frequently fight for the possession of some favorite breeding place. Badgers and foxes which have shared the same earth during winter often fight for Badgers and foxes which have shared the same earth during winter often fight for sole possession in the spring, when the fox invariably wins, a result which would hardly be to be form the relative physique of the two minus. But such quarrels are only for the sake of rearing their young, not for selfish reasons; and even apprehended pressure on the food supply rarely ext tas iff will, except in the case of the largest carnivorous birds and animals, which require a wider range for hunting and drive their young to other districts.

ANIMAL TEMPER PACIFIC.

The fodents and runniants are less jealous, and that strong social and gregarious instinct which the existence of ill temper as a permanent characteristic would inevitably destroy keeps them together in peace and harmony. They love society, and not the least marked difference between the temperament of animals and men is that animals do not by nere contact irritate each other—a positive and not the least market difference of the circular properties of the second contact irritate each other—a positive and not Holsted by machinery, the bovine falls gently upon one shoulder, and in most instances without a cry. Since occasions of difference are so few, nothing but the assumption of an ancient and inbred maligoity in animal minds, such as the author of "Three Men in a Boat" supposes in the case of fox terriers to have been due to a double dose of original sin, could justify the view so generally held that animals are as a rule ferocious and ill tempered, a notion summed up in Mr. Buruand's conclusions in "Happy Thoughts," that most of the creatures with which he came in confact in the country were, "when not dangerous, always very incertain." The exact contrary would be nearer the truth.

Animal temper is naturally pacific, movement of his blade. This is "sheethita," the killing. It insures complete effusion of blood, in which may be germs of disease that otherwise might find entrance into human bodies. Next follows 'bedigah,' the examination of instrument and victim. If a nick appear on the keen edge of the knife, that by extrainists is held to imply unnecessary suffering injurious chemical change and consequent unfitness of the carcuss for market. Animal temper is naturally pacific, equable and mild. Bud temper is the privilege of more highly organized natures; and the mild reseatment of the placeble tiger finds its development in the apoplectic fury of the mandril and the measured malice of mankind. Horsee's suggestion that Prometheus added to the fill temper of man the atrength of a mad lion must be taken literally.

SOME SAVAGE CREATURES.

The general law of good nature in the animal world makes the exceptions all the more remarkable. Quarrelsome species appear among a friendly tribe, just as an iil tempered individual does in a kindly species. But the flecrest and most vindictive of all, with the exception of the Cape budfalo, is the South African gou, which never loses its ill temper when tymed, and always remains among the few dangerous animals which the keepers at the Zoo have tolded with. Hardly less ill: tempered are the zebras and the wild asses, which suggest that human misunangement is not entirely to blame for the occasional ill, temper and obstinicy of mules and donkeys.

AN (PE SECRET.

A Suggestion Concerning Late Dinners. If we could all see that amusements, that society, the frequest intercourse of friendships, the intellectual meetings of minds are as important to the human well being as any other cultivation, or as any earthly acquisition, we should be willing to set apart some time for society as its due. Now, how is it? We give up the day to two things, work and eating—even the letter not being so much enjoyed as it should be for want of time. The claims of society are crowded into the fag end of the evening. People, by that time, are not in very good trim for society, and especially for another meal. They have little life to give to company, and if, in response to the tender hospitall y, they go to a friend's house and gat a fourth meal, they do so with little injoyment and at the expense of health. All this right be changed without violence to our business or to our resonable customs.

Take the case of evening parties. In-"It is no secret at all."

The speaker was a lady noted for the wonderful preservation of her health and beauty. She had been asked in a pircle of friends how she maintained her dazzileg complexion and good health. "A perfect complexion and good health in wonder the secret complexion and good health in wonder," she said, "depend apon two things—strong

Take the case of evening parties. Instead of cashing them at late hours, in winter, say, let them be held not later than 6 o'clock. Let the supper or dinner, as the case may be, be served as soon as the guests arrive, so that it would take the place of a regular meal. This would only require men and women to abandon their usual acceptions an hour earlier than usual. In a word, to take into account social life as a necessity. Assembling at 6, the company could disperse at about the usual time now of gathering together. There are few people who will not agree that this would be a sensible practice.—New York Ledger. Women Warriors of Dahomey.

Women Warriors of Dahomey.

The standing army of Dahomey consists of two badies—a female corps called the Amazons, knowr in Dahomey by the titles of "The King's Wires" and "Our Mothers," and a male corps composed of the palace guards, court er ers and other officials and the male adults in Abomey, the capital. Behind these two corps is the male population of the kingdom, which is liable to be called out, in part or as a whole, to take part in any expedition, and thus forms a sort of reserve. The female corps, or to use the common expression, the Amazons, was raised about the year 1729, when a body of women, who had been armed and furnished with banners, merely set stratagen to make the attacking force appear larger, behaved with such unexpected gallant y as to lead to the forming of 4 permanent corps of women.—Goldthwhite's Geographical Magazine. en," she said, "dipend apon two things—strong nerves and a good stomach. Most women are excessively nervous weak and longuid, and as a result their complexious are sallow and their faces pinched, drawn rad wrakled. Few women have perfect digestion. Now obviously, if women wish sound benith and good complexious they must get their nerves strong and their digestion good. The best thing in the world to de this is Dr. Greene's Nervene, for it is a walkerful strengtherer of Nervura, for it is a wonderful strengthener of weak nerves and gives a vigorous appetite and perfect digostion. It is the best Spring Tonic and Invigorator, and everybody needs a Spring modicine. Besides, it is a vegetable remetly, pure

"Dr. Greene's Kervura la a wanderful remed for nervous prostration and those terrible thred, weak feelings that make life a burden, almost too great to bear. I feel that I cannot say enough in its praise for what it has done for me. It gives one the most restful sleep and in fact does all and to the took and a sile to the same that a sile to the same that a sile to the same than a same than a sile to the same than a s more than all it claims to do. I wish every poor fired woman on the face of the earth could be in-duced to try it for three days; they would then understand its value, and life would not seem at wearisome and undestratie. ETTA E.
